The spotlight will be on the Baltic Sea and Russia. Traditionally, Hamburg has always been a major hub port for Baltic trade, but 2010 saw a temporary shift of some feeders to Rotterdam while Maersk surprised observers by establishing the Port of Gdańsk as its Baltic hub port.

Coastlink Hamburg 2011 will be asking what comes next. Topics include: Hamburg plans its future in a changing world, Who will provide the new containerships?, Shipowners and naval architects face up to the challenges, Will LNG-powered vessels be economic in the long term?, among others.
